Diversified

Admiral Beakley the navy wanted to keep the number small because the "deterrent - retaliatory" strength must be diversified, because when weapons were so safe against counterattack, their number did not need to be large and because the navy's requirements to meet "limited aggression" would be exceedingly heavy. The navy has nine nuclear Polaris-firing submarines either under construction or on the drawing board at present. The range of the Polaris which 13 still under development, will be about 1,200 miles.

THE BARD GAVE RICHARD III PRESS BAD

Belfast, Aug. 22. A N Irishman today inserted an "In Memoriam" notice in the advertisement columns for the Belfast Telegraph to commemorate the death of King Richard III of England.

It read: "Plantagenet" August 22, 1485, at Bosworth Field, Richard Plantagenet, youngest son of Richard, Duke of York, Most Gracious Prince, England's worthy King."

Richard III, slain at Bosworth in a battle which marked the end of the Wars of the Roses, imprisoned his young nephew princes—the boy King Edward V and his brother-in the Tower of London, where they later disappeared-murdered, it has been alleged, by their uncle. In recent years several writers have sought to clear the name of Richard.

Preston And England Star TOM FINNEY Looks At The New Season And Forecasts:

BETESTING FOR ENGLAND— WRIGHT THEY'LL MISS

Sitting on the terraces at Deepdale, I look at the freshly-cut grass, sniff the new paint on the stands and wonder what lies ahead.

land to take stock of her position and I am sure the selection committee is doing just that, What is the chief cause of England's footballing decline? Personally I am sure it's due to a neglect of the basic skill. In the struggle for League points, these are ull too often forgotten.

Too Fast

We all tend to play a little too fast and sacrifice accuracy for speed. And yet one only has to look at youngsters like fulfil the high premise, of last Johnny Haynes, Bobby Charl- season? ton and Jimmy Grieves to realise that we still have the talent needed to steer us back to the top,

I wonder what George Raynor feels about all this. The man who steered Sweden to the World Cup final has found British clubs singularly slow to accept his services.

He is currently with little-known Skegness Town in the Midland Lengue and yet I hear that the Swedes have already asked him to look after them when they come to Wembley.

Here, of course, is a real chance for England to regain some of her lost prestige and for this reason I hope Sweden brings her Italian League players.

players. If England will miss Billy Wright, so too will Wolves who will be striving for their third successive champion-ship. Much will depend upon Wright's successor George Showell—a young player who will be tackling one of the toughest jobs in football.

The club, I understand, expects him to follow Billy's footsteps all the way into the England team and that's certainly a possibility. He is big and strong with plenty of natural ability.

But Wolves are likely to find the opposition stiff.

Manchester United are likely to be stern challengers. I am waiting confidently for their attack—Bradley, Quixall, Violett, Charlton—to set Old Trafford alight. The only question is "When?"

If the line clicks this season, the legend of the "Busby Babes" could well live again.

Arsenal's Bid

Also trying to recapture past triumphs are Arsenal. Their buying of Mei Charles is a bid to return to the palmy days when the side was built around big centre-halves like Herbie

The Highbury fans are pinning their faith on Mel and he'll need broad shoulders to carry that burden of responsibility. I cannot help remembering the fate of another Welshman, Bryn purpose of leading Arsenal to

"Enquiries as to why bricks should be carried all the way from England to Bangkok were met by one of the officers remarking: 'Well I cannot say, but a great portion of our cargo is for the King, he is forever constructing and beautifying. The bricks may be for him.'

The type of brick, we are informed, is good and worth carrying a long way but why they should be imported all the way from Europe we fail to understand, when a very good quality of brick is made in Hongkong, and Amoy brick especially is famous.

"We are sure that the red bricks with which public buildings of Hongkong are being constructed would be tard to beat for quality and durability.
